Author Visits

Wednesday, September 22, 7 pm

Mark Bowden

Mark Bowden, author of the bestselling books Guests of The Ayatollah, Black Hawk Down and Killing Pablo, is a Contributing Editor at Vanity Fair, screenwriter, journalist, and adjunct professor at his alma mater, Loyola College in Maryland, where he teaches creative writing and journalism.

Black Hawk Down was a finalist for the 1999 National Book Award, and Killing Pablo received the Overseas Press Club's Cornelius Ryan Award for the best book of 2001. Bowden worked as a consultant and screenwriter on the film version of Black Hawk Down. He is currently adapting Killing Pablo for the screen and is writing an original screenplay for Imagine Entertainment. He has also written for The New Yorker, Sports Illustrated and The New York Times, among other publications. Bowden is a staff writer and columnist for The Philadelphia Inquirer and currently lives in Pennsylvania.

Friday, October 1, 4:30 pm

Tony Abbott

Tony Abbott, the award-winning author of Danger Guys, Firegirl, The Secrets of Droon and other books for young readers, began writing books for children when he began reading bedtime stories to his own children. He wrote his first book, Danger Guys, while taking a writing class with renowned children's author Patricia Reilly Giff. That first book, and the series that it began, became the cornerstone of his writing career. Since then, he's written over seventy-five books sold worldwide for readers ages 6 to 14.

Space is limited, so please register for all events.
